DSM:

BACKGROUND:

Severe disturbances in eating behaviors are the primary characteristics of Eating Disorders. Anorexia Nervosa is defined as a refusal to maintain normal body weight, even at the very minimum. Bulimia Nervosa is composed of repeated binge eating episodes followed by inappropriate behaviors to compensate for the binge eating (such as, but not limited to, self-induced vomiting, misuse of laxatives or other medications, fasting, excessive exercise).

An eating disorder treatment program is a multifaceted program, with a multidisciplinary treatment team including a medical physician, nutritionist or registered dietitian and at least one psychiatrist and one psychologist, who provide medical management and behavioral interventions including individual, cognitive and family therapy.

All non-hospital based providers of mental health or chemical dependency treatment must be licensed for the services being requested.
